As I pause to reflect on the Thanksgiving holidays of the past, I have so much gratitude for my family and holiday traditions.

Thanksgiving has always been my favorite holiday. I have so many fond memories of my mother preparing our Thanksgiving feast. She arose very early to get the turkey ready for the oven and then oh what wonderful smells we enjoyed throughout the day. Of course, it was always a fresh hen turkey because my mother said they had the fullest breast and were the juiciest. I didn't know about that but I knew they were always delicious.

My mother's main focus was preparing dinner so it was usually my job to set the table; and to this day, that is my favorite part of hosting any meal. I loved filling the cornucopia with fresh fruits and nuts to decorate the table often including some fresh cut mums from the garden. Thanksgiving was the only time we used my mother's beautiful Desert Rose dinnerware which was always carefully washed by hand after the meal and returned to the cupboard until next year and, oh yes, the "good" silver which was also saved for only very special occasions. Irma Bombeck would have had something to say about that!!!!

There were five of us in my family, but our Thanksgiving dinners always included people in the community who had no family or place to go to enjoy the holiday. There was always room for one more at my mother's table.

There is, however, one very special Thanksgiving that will always stand out for me and that is Thanksgiving, 1966, which is the day my only child was born—a beautiful 6 lb. 3 oz. baby girl named Janet Lynn. I was scheduled to bring the pies for dinner, which was tradition but I ended up bringing a new life into this world instead—ten days early. Of course, my mother, being the "mom" that she was, hurriedly baked the pies herself because no Thanksgiving dinner in her home would have been complete without them. After dinner, everyone came to the hospital to see the new addition to our family.

There have only been a few times over the years that Janet's birthday has fallen on Thanksgiving Day, and this year is one of them, which will make this Thanksgiving extra special for me. As traditions do, ours has changed over the years, but what hasn't changed is that the family still gathers and celebrates the holiday together and I still bring the pies!!

I hope that as the Thanksgiving holiday approaches, you will take the time to pause and reflect on all the things for which you are grateful and maybe also take a moment to "walk down memory lane" yourself. I loved doing it. One of the things I'm grateful for this year is the opportunity to share my memories with you, my Garden Club family. HAPPY THANKSGIVING TO YOU AND YOURS.

DISASTER-2011

Josephine, do you remember when 'we' decided to grow our vegetable garden in your ornamental garden in order to reduce our PG&E bill. You don't remember the 'we' but do remember it was 'my' decision. Well 'my' decision saved us about 10 dollars per month and made it necessary that we familiarize ourselves with the new Safeway store (where home grown vegetables are not). Of course 'our' experimental vegetable garden met with some success. The four tomato plants (Early Girl & Celebrity hybrids) that I planted in 5 gallon containers produced, instead of juicy tasty medium sized fruit, an abundance of "cherry like" tomatoes. Josephine, you know how I love Swiss chard with a splash of wine vinegar. Well, twelve healthy 4-inch nursery plants dispersed throughout your flower beds failed to rise to the occasion - not one lousy leaf. You'll find it hard to believe what I saw one early morning. There sat on a very nondescript leaf (later identified as Swiss Chard) a family of earwigs. The little ones were clearly distressed while Mom and Dad just shook their heads while trying to console the youngsters. At that time a jack rabbit came along and you know how they love, Swiss chard. Low and behold he ate the earwigs and didn't touch the "chard" and how I look forward to those red sweet bell peppers. Four plants produced 3 sickly peppers - two never had a blossom. However Mr. Jack rabbit took a fancy to their leaves shortly before he succumbed to lead poisoning.

Josephine, next year I'd like to make amends by locating our vegetable garden where it is well protected from deer and rabbits. I'll double dig those raised beds, mix in kitchen waste compost and manure and water conservatively with drip emitters and soakers hoses and you can gather the fruits of our labor without having to "tip toe through the tulips."

Cypress Canker

The causal fungus is most active during the rains of late winter and spring. Fungus spores are dispersed and infect the living bark and cambium, progressively killing tissue. This results in the death of branches, and sometimes the top of a tree, and in time the whole tree as the fungus invades new tissues. Usually, the first symptoms are pale green, then yellowing of affected portions of the tree, followed by death. Where the fungus has invaded the wood, a canker develops, followed by moderate to heavy resin flow around the canker. Diseased limbs can be pruned out. The whole limb should be removed and burned, chipped, or buried as branches left in a brush pile will liberate fungus spores for several years. Dead trees should be removed and destroyed (burned, buried, or chipped, and the wood composted). The principal hosts for cypress canker are Monterey cypress, Italian cypress, and several cypress hybrids — Leyland, Lusitania and Arizona cypress, plus Cupressocyparis bethamii, and C. macnabiana. Juniperus virginiana is also moderately susceptible. It is best not to replant new cypress immediately following the removal of diseased trees. (UCDavis recommended that we hold off on purchasing Italian Cypress or beware.

SPOILIGHT-GARDEN OF THE MONTH: Linda Waterstraat

I'm a "flatlander" at heart having spent the majority of my life in Illinois. When we moved to hilly Riviera Heights, gardening took on a whole new dimension! As you can see from the before picture, the slope is pretty severe and the soil is dense with tons of rock.

We decided to build terraces which allow me to walk on a flat surface. We added gypsum to the soil to loosen it up along with compost. We put in an irrigation system so each plant has its own emitter.

In the lowest tier I planted lavender- 'Grosso' which seems to be the most cold tolerant and provides the most fragrant buds. The top tier is a silvery gray dwarf Euryops pectinatus 'Munchkin' which blooms with bright yellow daisy-like flowers for the spring. I cut them all down to the most of the seasons, but heaviest in ground last February because they were damaged by the heavy, wet snow we had last winter. They are just starting to bloom again and will provide color all winter. I have Spanish lavender and yarrow growing in the circle around the flag pole. I love the blues and yellows when everything is in bloom. Upright rosemary flanks each side of the steps leading down to the bottom tier. Most importantly, all of these plants are deer resistant. Linda's

"Deer Diner" officially closed when those plants went into the ground!

Green Thumbs Up

To Linda Waterstraat for organizing two great field trips that were well attended. Jan 17th Program is cancelled. Linda W is looking for suggestions. Maybe (you) someone within the club will offer to do a craft/workshop.

It was a beautiful autumn morning at the Yerba Santa Goat Farm. Nineteen members were led on a tour of the farm by owner, Javier Salmon. We arrived just in time to see the goats led to pasture along with herd dog Toby, a friendly Great Pyrenees. We toured the milking room and the small room where the cheese is carefully made for sale at local farmers' markets and at Ferry Plaza in San Francisco.

At the end we were treated to samples of their delicious cheeses. B-a-a-a-h-h-h the way, I'm sure Javier was pleased with the quantity of cheese purchased by our members!

Lasting Gift's

by Doris Ellsworth

This article is to impart an idea to give the gift of bulbs to children this year. It could be one lasting/long time affect on them.

All of us can look back at events that changed our lives and made us what we are today. Such an event occurred to me when I was 11 years old when my father made the decision that I was responsible enough and presented me with the deed to my grandparent's one-room house that they lived in while the big house and barns were being built. His only stipulation was that I was to treat it with whatever I believed would honor their memory.

About the same time, Dad allowed me to go hiking with him in San Gabriel Canyon. I soon found a yard cuttings dump area by gardeners by the river. Dad allowed me to investigate since I'd just begun a garden and to my delight, I eventually found lots of bulbs – big and small. I planted them right away, not even knowing what kind I was planting. They all came up that spring to my surprise, delight and beauty.

There is still time to plant these wonderful gifts of color in your yard, in pots, or a gift for a child. Such a reward for so little effort! I'm trying fritillasia meleagris, Ixia, allium schubertii, and freesias for the first time.

Green Thumbs Up

to Nora Gerrard and Rena Clifton for their care and planting of new flowering plants. The Blue Star Memorial is one of our Civic Beautification Projects. The sign is in a small flower garden next to the Veterans' Building (next to the Museum in Lakeport).

> CLTTGC is proud to honor our veterans!

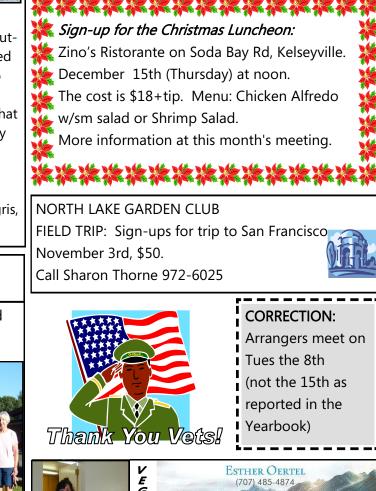

Marilyn, the second grade teacher at Lakeport Elem. School who has worked with us on the Smokey the Bear project, has asked if we would save Box Tops for Education labels for her. They are found on many products and make it possible for schools to get many needed items for the classroom. They redeem them for cash and buy computers, etc. If you would be willing to snip these and save them, I will deliver them in December and then again in May. Linda W.
