Thyme with President Leanne:

Each year the President picks a theme, compiles her year-book and then works very hard with all the club members to build on the past successes and make the CLTTGC stronger, better, more fun, more educational and do more to help our community. She sometimes feels she is hanging on by the skin of her teeth, but she persists and does her best.

At the mini-plant sale booth, I was so pleased to hear so many great comments from community members. They knew CLTTGC had crafted Meals on Wheels cards. They had plants they had purchased from the CLTTGC that were thriving. People thanked us for helping at the Ely Stage Stop and doing the Civic Beautification at the Library, the Library Park, the West Side Park, the Blue Star Memorial and Hartley Cemetery. I was thanked for the work we do at Garden Therapy, Adult Respite in Lucerne & Clearlake, for our amazing Mum Show, 4-H flower arranging, Penney Pines, Kelseyville Kids Garden Club, and for our beautiful Christmas wreaths. Not every person knew all of what we do, because as a club, we are so very active in so many areas. We were praised for what we are doing now and for what we have done in the past. Several people said they were just waiting to retire so they could be part of our club.

I was going to name each of you by name and write all that you did to help the club and found there was so much to list, it was impossible. We are a team. We made it a year to learn and grow both plants and friendships. We may experience some changes in the future, but we will compromise and be stronger because of it. We will mentor new leaders. We are the CLTTGC, and we are proud of each other and our accomplishments.

Our club will continue into the future with our caring members. The more you give to an organization the more you get. Thank you for allowing me to be your President this year. You stepped up to make it work. You gave of your time and your knowledge, and you hold a special place in my heart. Each of you has made this year a special joy! Thank you! In health, Leanne

Summer Thai salad with a twist.

1 cup cooked, lentils and 1 cup cooked Quinoa. Use package directions and then refrigerate.

After the lentils & quinoa are cold, mix in a bunch of fresh cilantro stemmed and slightly chopped to add a fresh flavor (leave a few un-chopped for garnish). You can add fresh ginger, sesame and lemon or cheat and add Ken's Asian Sesame with Ginger and Soy dressing using as much or as little as you like. Be sure to taste as you go along! Mix this all together. Make a first layer in a bowl of the mixed salad. Add a thin layer of asparagus slightly steamed or grilled and cut into 1" pieces. (Leave three pieces long for garnish). Add more of the mixed salad. Slightly mound the salad in the bowl. Around the edges add cherry tomatoes cut on a slant (or leave whole if you plan to use for more than one meal). I used almost a full package (but you can soon use yours from the garden). Also cut a lemon or two or more in half but with a fancy zigzag edge and grill these until they are slightly dark on just the top of the lemon. These can be added right at the end served warm or you can make them ahead of time. The lemons look great garnishing the dish & do add a fresh, zesty taste if squeezed on your cold summer salad. Add asparagus spears and a bit of the extra cilantro for additional garnish, and you have a yummy salad for hot weather. (Giant grilled Prawns can also be added to this salad if desired). Be a chef. Experiment!

Ann Blue, Ginny Cline and Leanne Harvey worked on Library Park Rounds getting them looking great for the Memorial Day weekend and the beginning of our summer season. Roses were cut back, Yellow Gazanias were planted & the grasses covering the Summer of Peace marker were expertly trimmed to enhance the area.

How to Start Peonies From Cuttings

Overview

Soft-stemmed perennials like peonies can be propagated by cuttings---provided that you cut far enough down the stem. Peony stems start in "eyes" that emerge from rhizomes just under the surface of the soil. Cuttings of the rhizome and growing from seed are the reliable ways to propagate these perennials. Rhizome cuttings, unlike seed-grown plants, generally bloom within a season or two of planting and always produce a plant identical to its parent. Make cuttings in the fall for spring blooms.

Step 1

Make a bushel basket or two of amended soil to fill planting holes; combine garden soil and peat moss, compost or manure in equal measure. Add a handful of bone meal, superphosphate or some other low-nitrogen fertilizer in each bushel of filler. Dig a hole about two feet deep and one foot square for each "division" or new plant---try to estimate the number you will have. You can always fill unused holes with soil. Give each plant about three feet of space on each side.

Step 2

Choose a day when the soil is moist, not dry, to start; if peony roots dry out, the plant will be set back and may not bloom next season. Dig peonies in the fall after clearing away summer mulch and cutting back dying foliage. Dig deeply underneath the roots with a spade or garden fork all the way around in order to lift the entire root ball. Once the ball is lifted, knock as much dirt off as possible using a hand cultivator or trowel. Work on one plant at a time if digging more than one peony.

Step 3

Gently clean the remaining dirt away from the rhizome---the fleshy root---and roots. Find the little eyes on the top half of the rhizomes. Be careful to avoid breaking any buds. These are the stem bases for new peony growth and, once broken, will not re-grow.

Step 4

Cut each rhizome into several pieces with a sharp knife. Each piece must have three to five eyes and a set of roots. Dust each section of the rhizome with an anti-fungal powder, available at most garden centers. If the peony that you are dividing is very old or very large, keep the roots moist with a spray bottle as you cut the rhizome.

Step 5

Discard any sections with discolorations or rot and trim older or broken roots on divisions. Remove mushy roots---they may have "root rot" or nematodes. Suspend the rhizome over the hole and spread roots while filling the holes with amended soil. Set the rhizome so that the eyes sit no deeper than an inch or so beneath the surface when the hole is filled. Eyes buried deeper than two inches probably will not bloom. Plants should be set no deeper than an inch and a half in southern growing zones. When the hole is filled, water the new plant well.

Tips and Warnings: Don't pack dirt down on new plants tightly. You may break eyes or push them deeper than two inches. When in doubt, over fill the hole and set eyes as close as an inch below the surface.

SPRING FLOWERS

Green Thumbs Up

For a successful Plant Sale. Many, many thanks to Jo Douville and her helpers: Leslie Jones Co-Chaired; Doris Ellsworth sold $60 worth of lovely aaa prior to the sale; Jo and Jerry Shaul brought their plants plus two truck loads donated by the Willits GC; Leanne Harvey, Jo Douville, Barbara Swanson & Suzanne Russell took the remaining plant and sold them at the Kiwanis Memorial Craft Show (spot donated by Joyce Porterfield) for a profit of $180.25. This list is not complete either: so many members also helped set-up, clean-up, brought plants that they have been nurturing at home, sold and shared their knowledge bringing in $1147.65. That is a GRAND TOTAL (as of this newsletter) of $1,327.90. Well Done! This money can be used for all our garden related projects outlined in our club objectives. Two swans lined the driveway with lovely plants. Hans and Carol transported plants to Leanne's house after the last sale and Ginny added up the money and added to our account! So many growers and helpers make these events a pleasure. Thanks for all the hard work planting, caring, labeling and transporting plants, tables and for all the jobs that got done.

WAXED FLOWERS

Bring the beauty of one-of-a-kind flowers into your home with this unique craft. Preserve one single rose in a bouquet... it'll be a surprise when all the other ones wither away...and one is left standing!

Waxed Flowers How-To

1. Collect fresh, firm flowers that are fully opened. Avoid flowers with delicate petals, which wither in wax.

2. Melt a pound of paraffin wax in a double boiler — one that is wide and deep enough to immerse a flower head.

Warning: Paraffin is extremely flammable. Never melt paraffin directly over a flame.

3. Heat wax to 130 to 150 degrees, maintaining temperature throughout process with a thermometer. Tip: At a lower temperature, the wax will not coat flowers effectively; a higher temperature will scorch them.

4. Cut stems to at least 2 to 3 inches.

5. Holding each flower by the stem end, dip the flower head completely into wax. Immediately lift out, allowing excess wax to drip into pot.

Tip: If you're waxing a flower with many petal rounds, spoon wax into flower middle to fully cover. For tiny blooms (such as hyacinth), insert a toothpick into the center and dip into wax. You can also use tweezers.

6. Place each blossom's stem in floral foam or on its side on a parchment-paper-lined tray. It will harden completely in 5 minutes.

7. Once the blooms have hardened, wax their stems by holding bloom and dipping stem in wax.

8. To display the blooms, arrange a few flowers at different heights, bundle with a rubber band, and insert into a small cup (we used a mint julep cup) filled with wet oasis. Embellish with bird and butterfly ornaments, and put under a display dome. You may also choose to cut the stems off completely and arrange them around a candle pillar. Waxed flowers should last for about a week
